

(Advaitavāde)

2

Brahman alone is true, and all its apparent modifications are false. There is no reality called the world other than Brahman.

There is causation in the world of empirical objects, but no causation in Brahman. Empirical causation is mutation, modification, or transformation of Brahman.